Mission of your Organization (from your group's constitution)

Rutgers Student Organization of Academic Research in STEM provides students with a location to start dialogues with members in the field of STEM. This mainly focuses on discussing research in the field but also provides career preparation and success through mentorship. Our club meetings will primarily consist of students reading research papers, analyzing it, and creating presentations to present to their peers. We will continue having events with individuals who are experts in a particular field of STEM, present their research that interests them in a journal symposium style. They will also show the students how to break down the research paper in question. This will encourage dialogue and serve as motivation for the club members to create similar presentations. Due to the pandemic, we plan on hosting seminars based on what students request, this includes "How to get research opportunities", "How to break down a research paper", "Why is research important."
