READ is Rutgers' first and only book discussion group, selects books of historical, social and cultural significance to read and discuss amongst a group of peers. We provide students an opportunity to expand their literary horizons and read everything from modern day best sellers to classic literature. We hope to facilitate a discussion in which members raise serious questions about, and develop a richer and more diversified understanding of the world, society and the nature of things. Among READ's objectives is the promotion of social and intellectual thought in addition to the promotion of literacy and moral goodness through philanthropic events.

Series Program

Program Name

Book Club Meeting

Series Program Description/Goal:

READ will meet every three to four weeks, depending upon the length of the selected book, or in successive weeks in unusual circumstances like the beginning of a semester. At each discussion-meeting, READ will discuss the book read over the previous reading period. At the end of each discussion-meeting, the book to be discussed for the next meeting will be voted upon and announced. This book will also be prefaced with a brief discussion on the historical and cultural mood in which the book was written, so as to give a context in which to read it. Attendees are asked to come to each discussion-meeting having read the assigned book, developed several ideas, and ready to engage in a lively and thought-provoking discussion.

Books read for each discussion meeting will be put up to vote. Those books which are selected by popular vote must also be approved by the executive board. The president reserves the right to reject any book for objections which are within reason (i.e. inappropriate content, the perceived inability of a book to foster discussion etc.) In the event that enough books are not approved to fill a semester, the executive board will be responsible for choosing the remaining books.
